

Transformation Consulting

making sure your technology keeps pace with your business

Technology and business are intertwined, but it isn't always easy to keep them aligned. Your organisation's technology strategy must be responsive and efficient to keep up with challenges and opportunities. This is where a business/technology consultant will add significant value. Augmenting your internal resources with external experts during critical, significant times of transformation and organisational transition can reduce risks and delays, support disruptive change and focus decisions.

Transformation strategy and delivery

Whether you need short-term assessment and guidance to set you off in the right direction or longer-term support to run the transformation, partnering with Envisian provides your organisation with flexibility, targeted expertise, relevant and tested experience and a defined time and budget commitment. Importantly, we bring an independent perspective to your challenges.

What are your challenges?

- Translating business objectives into effective and enduring IT outcomes?
- Turning digital strategy into a business case that will drive the major transformation investment and demonstrate returns?
- Defining/redefining accountability and providing leadership in times of change?
- Championing required change across the organisation?
- Feeling confident your IT will respond quickly to new opportunities?

Program review, remediation, rescue

Major initiatives with multiple stakeholders are bound to encounter challenges, some of which could compromise successful outcomes. Even when a program or project appears to be going well overall, any lingering sense of unease is worth exploring so that little problems don't become big ones. Regular reviews will help stakeholders gain an independent assurance of current project status, red flag any potential challenges and, if necessary, identify what is needed to get the project back on track.

If you are feeling a little bit uneasy, or hearing rumours that suggest things may not be going so well, it would be prudent to seek an independent perspective. Our consultants are familiar with the pitfalls, the pressures and the conflicts that can undermine the best-planned projects.

Choosing new technology

When the pace of technology change is unrelenting and customer expectations are constantly shifting, it's imperative you leverage the most appropriate contemporary technologies to drive the innovation and operational excellence you need to stay competitive. Bringing in new solutions and applications to meet your organisation's business and IT needs will require current and specialised knowledge.

Before you engage with systems integrators and vendors, speak to an independent Envisian consultant. Our senior business/technology consultants have extensive insights into a wide range of innovations. Their combined knowledge will help you understand which new technologies will deliver your business requirements. From an increasing myriad of technology offerings they will help you select the ones that will integrate well and drive your business forward, in both the short and longer term. And if you have made commitments, independent feedback could provide deeper insights and identify future improvements, possibilities and costs.

What are your concerns?

- Will it deliver customer expectations?
- What are the hidden costs?
- How does it meet security and privacy compliance?
- Who will have control?

Integrating new technology

As your organisation embraces innovative and contemporary technologies, you will face decisions about which technology assets and capabilities to retain and which to insource, outsource, onshore, offshore or move to an 'as a service' model.

Envisian has worked through the considerations, implications and decisions in a variety of industries and organisations. Our senior advisers are available on call to seamlessly supplement your internal teams, helping them progressively shape your technology operations from what they are today into what they need to be into the future.

What's important to you?

- Retain and nurture your organisation's valuable intellectual property?
- Uplift technology operational efficiencies and service levels?
- Optimise total cost of technology ownership?
- Transition IT from a reactive function to a proactive service with defined and improved service levels and business value impact?

At Envisian our philosophy is simple: flawless delivery, every time.
